Dr Gibbon s Dispensary,

6 KEARNY STREET NEAR COMMERCIAL, Established in 1854, for treatment of Scarcel and Chronic Diseases, such as Gonorrhœa, Gleet, Stricture of long standing, Seminal Weakness, Impotency, etc. Skin Diseases of long standing and Ulcerated Legs successfully treated

Horrible Diseases.

Many thousands of persons both male and female are there who are suffering out a miserable existence from the effects of secret indulgence or from virus received into the system Look at their pallid emaciated countenances, ulcerated throats and noses, blotches on the skin, deadening pains in the head, dimness of sight, and other broken down constitutional symptoms disqualifying them for the happiness of married life. In this hour of their situation these unfortunate sufferers should not trifle with quacks and pretenders, but consult at once a physician who has had experience in such cases, and whose reputation is established by many years of honorable practice. Such a one is Dr. Gibbon, and those who place themselves under his care may religiously rely upon his honor as a gentleman and his skill as a physician to restore them to perfect health. Many who have been cured by Dr. Gibbon have become prominent and influential citizens of this community, and can be referred to by permission. Dr. Gibbon does not deceive people by exaggerated statements, but will candidly state the nature of each case that may require his attention, and will not commence treatment unless a perfect cure can be effected. Dr. Gibbon's remedies are purely vegetable, and are prepared from his own prescriptions, which have been used in his practice for many years with the most astonishing success. Persons at a distance may be cured at home by addressing Dr. GIBBON, 415 Kearny street, corner of Commercial, San Francisco. Post Office Box 282. REMEMBER TO PUT BOX 282 ON THE LETTER AND PAPER. FREE. Dr. Gibbon will please inform DR. GIBBON of the Pacific Coast, and refer to the Daily Oregonian

The Coming Campaign and the Democracy

NO. II.

In my first communication I started out with the assertion that the coming Presidential election was destined to tell greatly for the weal or woe of the American Republic and showed from the conduct of the Democratic party in the Administration of James Buchanan from their conduct before the war, during the war and since—that they could not be safely trusted with a restauration to power Many of your readers will doubtless remember that as long ago as 1856, when Fremont was contesting with Buchanan the race for the Presidency, scores of Democratic speakers and Democratic editors said publicly and without blushing that the election of Fremont would justify the South in a dissolution of the Union. They reiterated this language at Lincoln's nomination, and they and the party they represented are unquestionably guilty of first promoting and afterwards encouraging the South to revolt. The defeat of Fremont but postponed the crisis, and gave the South time, under Democratic countenance and protection, to prepare for that unjust, unholy and fratricidal strife to which Democratic teachings and Democratic sanction had for years been urging that unhappy portion of our country men Facts—patent and notorious facts—can be cited in plenty to prove that the Democratic party is responsible for the four years of bloody strife which under a divided country, has desolated our land, cost us upwards of a million of lives, and saddles us with a debt which it will tax our energies to pay for years to come. In my first communication I dwelt at some length upon the inimitous conduct of Buchanan, his Cabinet, and Democratic administration, showing how he encouraged treason and secession, falsified his oath of office, and did not "take care that the laws be faithfully executed," and gave to his successor in office an already broken Union over which the laws were not executed and over which he had miserably failed to exercise or try to exercise the duties of Chief Magistrate.

In this number I intend to to show from historical records, that the Democratic party is the author of both nullification and secession—the old founder of criminal dogmas—devised at first for selfish party purposes and persevered in for many years, until their bitter fruits were reaped, and the treasonable nature of the organization placed beyond doubt or the possibility of disguise.

We will commence with the founder of the party—Thomas Jefferson. As old Federalist, he displayed and professed the same principles with Washington and Adams, until after Washington's second election, when an uncontrollable itching for office in himself caused him to break with the Father of his country and the responsible party which he had previously been associated with and join a low and rabble opposition—an opposition to wholesome and just measures of Government Professing friendship and esteem to Washington's face he was a maligner of that great and good man behind his back After Washington's second term of office, Mr Adams was elected, and Mr Jefferson became furious and unscrupulous in his opposition to him and his administration, not so much from an honest difference of opinion with regard to his policy, but from a desire to raise a formidable opposition party and ride into power upon their shoulders He, Thomas Jefferson, is the real father of nullification and its principles were first manifested and avowed in the Kentucky resolutions of 1798, which were the work of his brain and pen. In a few weeks after their passage by the Kentucky Legislature, the resolutions of 1799 were introduced into and passed by the Legislature of Virginia These resolutions, similar to those invented by Jefferson, were drawn up by Mr. Madison another prominent Democrat. Both were peculiarly Democratic inventions, and practically asserted the right of a State to nullify a law of Congress when such law was found objectionable to said State History declares that George Nicholas, who introduced Mr Jefferson's resolutions into the Kentucky Legislature, thought it necessary to, and did, modify the same, making them less violent and less revolutionary than the original copy of Jefferson. The resolutions of Mr Madison were introduced into the Virginia Legislature by John Taylor, a man who had suggested and advocated a few months before, the idea of a separate confederacy, to be composed of Virginia and North Carolina. Thus were the first seeds of treason, nullification and disunion, planted notoriously by prominent Democrats, one of whom is still spoken of by his party as the "Apostle of Liberty," and the other as the "Father of the Constitution" To what base uses language may be perverted! Jefferson was the "Father of Nullification," and to him Madison played second fiddle These resolutions were the dragon's teeth sown, whose harvest was secession and all its attendant anguish of war and blood They instilled into the minds of many a thirst for revolution, and led them to believe it right to practice nullification and secession upon the most trifling pretenses. We will notice their fruits as we proceed.

To show what Washington thought of these resolutions and their authors, and to what they were tending, let us notice a letter of his, written to Patrick Henry in the early part of 1799, the last year of his noble and honorable life. He was so impressed with the necessity of counteracting these disunion resolutions and rebuking their authors, that he addressed the patriot Patrick Henry, and urged him to become a candidate for Congress, that he might, by his powerful eloquence and strong influence in that body, stand as a barrier to this new party, now becoming formidable, and guarantee the Union and public peace. The following are the words of Washington, written upon this occasion

It would be a waste of time to attempt to bring to the view of a person of your observation and discernment the nature of a certain party among us to disquiet the public mind with unfounded clamor to stir up resentment of the administration in order to set the people at variance with their government and embarrass all its measures Unfortunately, and extreme sly do I regret it the State of Virginia has taken the lead in this opposition I have said the State because the conduct of the Legislature in the eyes of the world, will authorize the expression, and because it is an incontrovertible fact that the principal leaders of the opposition dwell in it and that with the help of the chiefs in the other States all the plans are arranged and system actually pursued by their followers in other parts of the Union though in no state except Kentucky, that I have heard of has legislative countenance been obtained but in Virginia

It has been said that the most influential citizens of the State are well affected to the present Constitution and Government and the Union, and I am willing to believe it may be believed But how is this to be reconciled with their choice of Representatives to the Congress and their State Legislature who are opposed to the General Government and who by the tendency of their measures, would destroy the Union? Can it be expected will it be looked for peace and happiness if the seeds of disorder or property already exist should ripen And what else can result from the big words among us why by all the measures of their foes are driven matters to extremity if they cannot be counteracted effectually?

These views of Washington show that he had a correct estimate of the Democratic organizers and of the party they had reared It would be well if the masses of the present day thus thoroughly understood them

Patrick Henry, the orator of the Revolution took the advice of Washington and became a candidate for Congress He was elected but unfortunately for the country, died before taking his seat The same year the Father of his country—the immortal Washington passed away and the pernicious principles of Democracy triumphed and controlled the country for many long years It is the pride and boast of the party that under their rule the country prospered and increased in population and became extended in territory But this can be shown to be the result of inevitable destiny, in spite of their principles and in direct opposition to their resolutions of '98 '99 When Mr Jefferson was first elected, at the close of Adams term after having recited the evils which he had might by anticipation bring upon his head upon his presuming to raise perhaps a storm and in his inaugural address he warned against the restoration of that harmony and confidence without which as he well knew liberty and happiness could not last long

[illegible] difference of opinion, as he assured [illegible] of principle "We are all Republicans" A sense of decency and propriety had caused Jefferson, when President, to repudiate somewhat his former sentiments and [illegible] conduct—he became more moderate in his tone more rational in his policy When Aaron Burr, a prominent Democrat, was found trying to dismember the Republic he even laid aside the resolutions of '98 together—for it that they had justified States in resisting the supreme government—and advocated preserving the Union a while longer and hanging Burr if possible Here he was quite inconsistent. But after acting that his religious sentiments were about the same as those of Tom Payne although he had not the courage to publicly avow them, we will pass by this Democratic progenitor and father of Nullification, and take a brief view of his successors of the same party

Madison's administration was noted for a war with Great Britain, very poorly conducted, and the advantages and victories of which were rather in spite of the Administration and in opposition to it than from any wise or statesmanlike policy of the party in power

Both Jefferson and Madison, although men of intellect, cannot justly be accused of the taint of treason and gross inconsistency, for the very government they had been instrumental in forming they both, by their resolutions of '98-'99, had taught might be warred upon and overthrown

Of Monroe's administration we will say little. It was, for the most part, smooth and peaceful, for the resolutions of '98 '99 had been almost forgotten—but we shall presently see their baneful influence as we pass in review the workings of Democracy

After Monroe came the four years' term of John Quincy Adams, the estimable Federalist, who was so shamefully treated by the defeated Democracy and his administration so maligned that he afterwards declared the four years Clay's Presidency were the most unhappy of his life And yet this abuse, opposition and vituperation were wholly unjustifiable wholly unprovoked

The next Democratic President was Andrew Jackson He succeeded John Quincy Adams, and filled two terms of office During his first term the resolutions of '98 '99 were revived under the leadership of Calhoun who harped upon the idea of sovereign States, although no such words were used in the instrument of the Constitution of the United States, and it is manifestly absurd to claim that States are sovereign when the people have delegated that power to a national Government Under the principles of '98 '99, the State of South Carolina attempted Nullification—proposed to resist the laws of Congress, and succeeding in this, would no doubt have seceded from the Federal Union But Jackson, though elected by the Democracy whose progenitors had taught the right of resisting the Government, had the pluck to turn his back upon their "time-honored principles," and made himself immortal by rapidly stamping the feelings of Jefferson and Madison, and maintaining the authority of the Government and the integrity of the Union His words "After any sacrifice, at every hazard, this Union must be preserved, are a lasting rebuke to, and condemnation of the resolutions framed by Jefferson and Madison for they had affirmed the right of the smallest State in the Union to nullify the laws of Congress and thus destroy a Government founded upon the right of the majority to rule Yes General Jackson rose above the "time honored principles" of Democracy, conquered an incipient rebellion without bloodshed, and deserves to be set down as a Republican, and no more named in connection with that party with which he was allied Under his ruling, Democracy had reached the zenith of its power. Under Martin Van Buren, his successor, it began to degenerate, under Polk it rallied a little, under Pierce it became detestable, and under Buchanan infamous

Franklin Pierce in his last message to Congress spoke of the Republican party as a party professing free suffrage, and committed to the doctrine of no more slavery, but he took it upon himself to say that "their real object was to interfere with slavery in the States where it existed" This is the sum and substance of his language, and this malignant falsehood that may be rightly termed "an odious, damned lie," had the effect of deluding the people of the South and arraying them against the North, and a belief in this lie coming shamelessly from the mouth of a Chief Magistrate hurried on the people of the South to that wicked war which Buchanan countenanced and refused to move a arm to restrain. Could we enter one of those cemeteries of the slain of battle among the almost numberless dead, many very many Southerners could doubtless be found filling untimely graves, whose national apostacy, ruin and death came from a faith in the detestable Pierce and a confidence in the infamous Buchanan

The Democracy are the founders of nullification and secession It is useless for them to boast of the country under their rule, since under their rule secession was accomplished and the Union for a time died lived

There was once a poor poet came to the house of a rich man, called Tearle, and asked for a

No Follower of Douglas

The Democratic candidate for Congress professes to have been a supporter of Douglas for the Presidency in 1860, and to have followed the example of that eminent man after secession was consummated and the rebellion began This declaration is of a kind with nearly all others which he makes It is easy to show that he was no follower of Douglas Professing fidelity to Douglas the patriot, he followed Buchanan the traitor, and made common cause with Jo Lane, John Whitaker and the secession wing of the Democratic party, proclaiming the doctrine of "no coercion, and upbraiding and denouncing the prosecution of the war for the preservation of the Union

In the last letter ever written by Douglas, dated Chicago, May 10, 1861, and addressed to the Chairman of the Democratic State Committee of Illinois such men as J S Smith, professed followers of Douglas, but who took up with the Buchanan and Jo Lane doctrine against the prosecution of the war against the rebels, were alluded to in these words, "It seems that some of our friends are unable to comprehend the difference between arguments used in favor of an equitable compromise in the hope of averting the horrors of war, and those urged in the support of the Government where war is being waged against the United States, with an avowed purpose of producing a disruption of the Union and a total destruction of the Government." Here is Smith's case described exactly He could not "comprehend the difference" which Douglas and every other patriot well understood. Therefore instead of following the example set by the Illinois statesman, instead of urging the people to rise in their might and put down the rebellion, he adopted the Buchanan policy that coercion was no constitutional, and threw his influence against the war from the commencement to the end of the struggle. He kept on talking about "compromise," and so urging that the Government had no constitutional power to put down the rebellion by force of arms, though it was apparent to every one that war was the only means of saving the country. Here is the way Douglas put it, in the letter we have already quoted from

All hope of compromise with the cotton States was gone when they assumed the position that the separation of the Union was complete and final and that they would never consent to a reconstruction—not even if we would furnish them a blank sheet of paper and permit them to prescribe their own terms In view of this state of facts, there was but one path of duty left to patriotic men It was a question of government or no government, of country or no country, and it became the imperative duty of every Union man, of every friend of constitutional liberty, to rally to the support of our common country, its government and flag

Did Smith do this? Did he raise his voice against this attempt to destroy the country? Did he take "the one path of duty left to patriotic men?" When or where did he ever utter a word in denunciation of these rebel destroyers, or a word of encouragement to those who, regardless of party, flew to the standard of the Union? Rather did he not begin at once to declaim against the prosecution of the war, to raise objections against it on practical constitutional grounds, to deliver public addresses in the endeavor to convince our people that the war was wrong and ought not to go on? Who does not know that this was his course? "A Methodist" who has published an article in these columns states that "on more than on one occasion the presence of that denomination have publicly replied to his treasonable harangues," and probably there is not a school district in the State where there are not men who have heard him make speeches in which he tells the public which Douglas, with his dying breath, urged his countrymen to pursue "There can be but two parties," said Douglas, "patriots and traitors." and Smith refused to take sides with the patriots He passed over at once to the company of Buchanan, Breckinridge, and their adherents, and in the early part of the war made speeches in which he distinctly approved and affirmed the doctrines of Lane's secession orations, taking his place with the enemies of Douglas and against the friends of the Union

In the Senate of the United States on the 3d of January, 1861, Douglas said

When reading the President's last annual message, my attention was arrested by the remark which struck me, that the Government has no power to make a State back into the Union if she did secede, followed a few lines afterwards with a recommendation to appropriate money to purchase the Island of Cuba. It occurred to me instantly what a brilliant achievement it would be to pay Spain $300,000,000 for Cuba, and immediately admit the island into the Union as a State, and let her sit side and cheek by jowl with Spain for ever and ever. [A voice—"Would the Spanish Queen would be ready to sell the island again for half or double the $?] Laughing the gullibility of the purchaser

We cite this passage for the purpose of showing the position of Douglas, and pointing out the difference between that position and the one J S Smith assumed at the beginning of the rebellion and held all through. Douglas believed in coercion as a remedy for secession, while Smith held that the Government had no power to coerce a State, then joining hands with Buchanan, Lane, Whitaker and other enemies of Douglas, and howling at every opportunity from the commencement to the end of the conflict against the prosecution of the war

In his speech here Smith exclaimed Would to God Lincoln had been elected President of the United States!' Suppose he had been elected, what an entertaining spectacle it would have been, while he was prosecuting the war against traitors, to see J S Smith perambulating the country, denouncing the war, and claiming at the same time to be one of Douglas' most devoted followers'

It is held that the rebellion was entirely causeless and should be put down by the strong hand of national power. As Smith with his habitual unscrupulousness, has made an effort to show to show that Douglas held the Republican party accountable for the war, we quote from a speech made by Douglas in the Senate on the 25th of March, 1861, in reply to Breckinridge, in which the futility of the main pretext for secession is thoroughly exposed Douglas said

I repeat, the South have got all they ever claimed in all the Territories There never has been a time since the Government was founded when the right of the slave-holders to emigrate to the Territories, to carry with them their slaves, and to hold them as other property was as fully and distinctly recognised in all the Territories as at this time and that too, by the unanimous vote of the Republican party in both Houses of Congress From the beginning of this Government down to 1859, slavery was prohibited by Congress in some portion of the Territories of the United States But now, for the first time in the history of this Government, there is an effort to force upon the American where slavery is prohibited by act of Congress

To the Republican Senators who had voted with great sacrifice for the purpose of preserving the Union, Mr Douglas said

You have acted both generously and magnanimously on this occasion You have come forward and done for the South just what I have been urging you to do for twelve years what you would not do when you were in a minority What more do the Southern states want? What more can any man demand? Non intervention is all they asked? Will it be said that the South requires in addition to these law of Congress to protect slavery? That cannot be said for only last May the Senate by a nearly unanimous vote a unanimous vote of the Southern men declared that affirmative legislation was not needed Inasmuch, then, as no legislation by Congress for the protection of slavery is necessary inasmuch as no occasion has ever arrived to refer it to necessary and inasmuch as the Republican party of the Republicans is absent and what cause is there for further alarm in the Southern State?

Addressing himself to Breckinridge he said

In view of these facts I shall expect the Senator to go back to his native State and for in every hill top and in every valley and up in every sunning plain, where that old Kentucky has got justice and equality in the Territories of the Union So far as legislation is concerned the Southern States have got all they ever asked The Republicans have granted it I will not say that it has been extorted but I think they so far the concession for the sake of peace and Union

Yet Smith says the Republican party caused the war and pretends to quote from Douglas to justify himself in having aided and abetted the southern disunionists A man who professes to have been a follower of Douglas but who refused to heed the appeal which Douglas made to his countrymen to spring to arms to defend their country against traitors, has no business or right to use the name of Douglas on any occasion whatever Douglas said the South had got all they asked and all they could demand, and that this was granted by the Republicans for the sake of preserving the Union, and when he found that notwithstanding this great concession, the rebels were bent on separation, he gave his voice at once for war Did Smith respond? Not one word He read Buchanan's and Whitaker's messages over again, and began to croak about "peace" and to prate about the unconstitutionality of "coercion," continuing his opposition to the war policy till the conflict was over and the country was saved by better men. The rebellion having been quelled in spite of the opposition of himself and party, he now undertakes, as another labor of love, the restoration of defeated rebels to political power

CHARACTERISTIC EFFRONTERY —Ad interim of the Herald can discover the names of fifteen Democrats who voted for the passage of the Pacific Railroad Bill, but does not point them out Even granting that so many as fifteen voted for it, these were only one third of the Democratic members of Congress Where were the other two thirds? And where was George K Shiel the Democratic Congressman from Oregon that he did not vote for the bill? By the admission of the "organ," two thirds of its party in Congress opposed the Pacific Railroad Bill, and yet they now claim it as a Democratic measure! And somebody publishes an admonition to the organ" calling on Oregonians to remember that "this Rump Congress" has resolved to give no more grants to Pacific Railroads This is a specimen of Copperhead effrontery that would befit Jo Smith himself. For a party whose traditional policy has been one of opposition to internal improvements by the General Government, one third only of whose members of Congress, (giving the "organ" the benefit of its claim), voted for the Pacific Railroad—the Oregon member being numbered among those not voting for it—for this party to assail its political opponents because they think it unwise, in the present state of the finances, to grant large additional subsidies to build more railroads, is a proceeding which well befits the shameless character of Copperheadism

A friend writing from Yamhill county says it is urged by Democratic speakers there that the soldier vote four years ago was almost entirely for McClellan Here are some figures which it may do those fellows who have lately got to claiming that they put down the rebellion some good to ponder on The vote of the Ohio soldiers was Lincoln, 40,967, McClellan, 2 746 The vote of the Iowa soldiers was, Lincoln, 17,310, McClellan, 1,921 The army vote for Wisconsin and Michigan were in about the same proportion The vote of the Pennsylvania soldiers was Lincoln, 26,712, McClellan, 12,410 a larger proportionate vote for the Democrats than was given by the soldiers of any other State The vote of the New York soldiers was counted in with the home vote, and was never ascertained The soldiers vote of New Hampshire was Lincoln, 2 018, McClellan, 571 No provision was made for the soldiers of Illinois, Indiana, and some other States, to vote. The returns generally throughout the war showed that the soldiers voted for the Union candidates and against the Democratic at the rate of about five to one.

NICE DISCRIMINATION —After making arrangements with a "competent gentleman" to conduct the "organ" during his absence, Berish sailed on the last steamer for San Francisco,—so we are informed by an adieu published two or three days ago in his paper The first effort of the editor ad interim was a remarkable one When we read its caption, "Food for Fools, our admiration was unbounded Then such a caption for the introductory effort, nothing could have been more appropriate It describes the nature of Ad interim's articles exactly. Berish himself never showed so nice an appreciation of the proprieties of composition If Ad interim will keep that heading, "Food for Fools" as a standing caption for all the articles he writes, and get Berish to adopt it for the same purpose when he returns, the labors of the "competent gentleman" will not have been in vain.

A simpleton at Oregon City named Mckinney, publishes a three column article in one of our Democratic papers, giving his reasons why he cannot support the Union party These reasons are two. The first is that he is frightened about "negro equality" and thanks himself in danger of being left behind by the negro in the race for place, power and respectability The second is the exemption from taxation for State and municipal purposes, of United States bonds in the hands of individuals" This is an objection against the Constitution of the United States and the decisions of the Supreme Court during a period of fifty years If a person in this age of enlightenment is such an incurable fool as to urge such reasons as these as as basis for political action, his natural place is in the bosom of the Democratic party

Some of the Copperheads are growing mightily over the gain of a few hundred votes in Connecticut As that State has long been the most closely contested in the Union, and as it is but a suburb of New York City, where any required number of Democratic votes can be obtained, this trifling gain for that party is a matter of no political consequence, especially as the Republicans have secured the United States Senator Last year the total vote of Connecticut was 94,154, this year it is 99 303, an increase of over 5,000 The Republican vote this year is over 2,000 larger than ever before, and over 4,000 larger than Lincoln received in the election of 1864 Of course the Democracy have not heard of the Union gains in Rhode Island.

CALIFORNIA —The Marysville Appeal reviews at the unanimity of feeling and action that was manifested at the late Union State Convention of California It says It is now hoped that the days of boiling and contention between long and short hairs have come to a close It is time that we should say an end, not a truce, to dissension hereafter Let every lover of the country and of equal rights and liberty stand shoulder to shoulder and with General Grant for our standard bearer, we shall carry the State of California next November by a majority of fifteen, or sixteen hundred votes"

Public Opinion on the Impeachment of Andrew Johnson

[From the New York (Roman Catholic) Tablet]

Here it strikes us is the weak point in the President's defence. Not being either the law making or the judicial but simply the Executive of the Government, it (the tenure-of-office act) was law for him till the competent authority had declared it unconstitutional and he was bound to obey it and see that it was faithfully executed or resign his office. He did neither but set up and acted on his own private judgment against Congress. Has he not then exposed himself to impeachment whether the law be constitutional or not? In the case of an indictment in the courts of law for the penal offence created by the statute the plea to the constitutionality of the statute would be pertinent but we cannot see what such a plea can avail him in the High Court of Impeachment, nor indeed how it could be interposed.

[New York Tribune March 6th.]

The value of the present process, apart from the judicial investigation of many misdemeanors which it implies is that it will make future Presidents more careful of the means by which they may seek their ends and if it does nothing else we shall really be in less danger of impeachments in the time to come than we have frequently been in the past, so far at least as their necessity is concerned. For in the first place, so far from degrading the office by this procedure, it is easy to see that we do actually raise its standard of qualification. Impeachment now means that to-morrow and in all future time to come of the Republic, we want [illegible] to have, whatever may be his political opinions, truth, decency, sobriety and respect for the laws observable in the tenant of the White House, and scrupulously observed by him, whatever may be the confusion and difficulty of public affairs.

[From the Toledo Blade.]

The impeachment of Andrew Johnson and his removal from the high office he has disgraced, cannot but be attended with the happiest results. First, the question of reconstruction, so long the cause of excitement, will be [illegible] and closed up in a very short time.

And what is of more importance the country will from that time be at peace. There will be no longer that dread of revolution—no longer that fear of civil war—no longer that foreboding of trouble that has possessed the mind of every man since the President went over to the enemy. The policy of the Government [illegible] and settled, and the work of reconstructing the states of war progresses smoothly and steadily, business will settle into regular channels, for business men will know today what to expect to-morrow and the interests of the country will not be at the mercy of [illegible] reckless demagogues and unprincipled speculators.

Let the good work be hurried along as fast as [illegible].

[From the Kentucky Statesman.]

Mr. Johnson's most strenuous defenders admit that he violates a law in removing Mr Stanton and the Constitution in appointing Gen Thomas Secretary of War ad interim, but they justify the action upon the ground that his motive for so doing was good. Such a plea is simply absurd. No man has a right to break a law for any purpose, good or bad, simply if he be an executive officer. The President is neither a judge nor legislator, and it is his duty to enforce the laws until they are repealed or adjudged by the courts to be unconstitutional. If a case arises in the [illegible] operation of the law to test it, the President can avail himself of it, but he has no right to deliberately violate it and then plead in self defence a desire to have it tested.

[From the St. Joseph (Mo.) Union, March 3.]

The county demands of Congress that the battle be a short one. Johnson has been arraigned before the highest tribunal in the land for high crimes and misdemeanors. Let him have a fair trial, but let there be no unnecessary delays. He will doubtless seek by his quibble and sophistry to hinder, delay, and postpone his trial, but in this he must not be allowed. The acts charged against him are matters of record, and will not be, cannot be, denied. The testimony will be brief. The simple question will be [illegible] Johnson been guilty of a violation of the Constitution and of our laws? To protract the discussion by bringing up outside issues would be exceedingly unfortunate for Congress and the country.

The people want justice, and they want this matter settled speedily. The moral effect, even of bringing that high handed criminal to [illegible] conviction would be very great, not only in this [illegible] but throughout the world.

[From the Louisville Gazette, March 4.]

As the [illegible] hurry on rapidly to their close, the [illegible] of the rule was commenced [illegible] and continued in most [illegible] few days all, in the [illegible] nation is settling down [illegible] somber pace. [illegible] firm [illegible] of adherents [illegible] of men of [illegible] is [illegible] encountering [illegible] ENERGY [illegible] of the greatest [illegible] by the eager to witness rather than the success of the friends of [illegible] give assurance that fears are groundless; that we shall outride safely the [illegible] and when refitted we shall be able to [illegible] the [illegible] principle of our Government.

Without commotion, without bloodshed, the President will, we believe, be removed from office and sent back to private life, [illegible] only the divorce of an unsuitable wedding. In the records of these few years his history is without a parallel.

[From the New York Sun.]

With a President in full accord with Congress [illegible] no reason for delaying [illegible] of the two Houses in States [illegible] what the [illegible] accession of [illegible] and. With all Federal [illegible] secured, we should expect to [illegible] to the Union restoring the exclusive control of their affairs [illegible] by the will of their own people.

[From the St. Louis Republican.]

For a man of pure character their might have been some feeling of willingness to overlook [illegible] influence. But all decent [illegible] Andrew Johnson, in a moral if not in a legal point of view ought to have been turned out of office long ago. He had disgraced the nation long enough. Shaming the whole country, exciting contempt upon the free institutions which lifted him to high [illegible] and flung a blot upon the Republic's honor which nothing but his removal can [illegible]. He is a pestilence and [illegible] curable harm to that class of the people from which he came, and to whom his elevation was once a source of pride. He was a laboring man a man of the [illegible] this demagogue used to boast. Where is the laboring man in all this land who does not feel indignant by the recollection? who does not realize that those who are aristocracy will be fond of pointing to this Johnson as a sample of self made men who does not see that democracy and the use of the people are dishonored by such an unworthy representative. His impeachment [illegible] action after solemn trial, and his removal with the hearty approval of the whole people will at least show the world that Andrew Johnson does not truly represent the working classes the democracy, the virtue, honesty or morality of the Republic. The country has been disgraced long enough. He has violated law let him suffer the penalty.

The Earthquake at Formosa Awful Scenes of Terror and Confusion

The quiet town of Tamsui became the scene of much excitement on the morning of the 18th in consequence of a terrible earthquake experienced at 10 20 A M. No rumbling was previously heard and the only intimation we had was a slight vibration at first which drove us out of the house until it increased to such a rate as to make us all stagger like drunken men. While we stood reeling about, prepared to see the house fall in our attention was suddenly attracted to the next hill upon which stands part of the town of Tamsui by a loud crushing noise and a dense cloud of dust which too truly indicated the mischief. Houses had been shaken down. The people were in a wild state of commotion and rushed about bewildered, like ants.

The scene on the hill was awful, villagers apparently paralyzed stood looking at the ruins of their homes, too frightened even to try and extricate the unfortunate ones who were buried alive beneath the ruins. The mud walls of the native houses appeared to have fallen inward and crumbled at once, and with the roof above debarred all chance of saving people alive. Hoes and spades could not be found. The people were too alarmed or indifferent to do anything. Two on a bed were got out, but dead. A woman who must have been cooking was got out alive with her face fearfully burned, many more were severely wounded. The shock came more from the northeast, going towards the southwest. Houses fell in regular order just as if artillery had been fired at them. The loss of life at Tamsui is estimated at thirty but Pa-tsai-na a small town distant a few miles, suffered more and it is reported one hundred and fifty persons were killed. It was a most merciful dispensation of Providence that the shock did not occur at night. Houses on elevated sites suffered most.

At Keelung we learn that the first shock was felt at 9 45 A M and lasted about thirty seconds. The earth cracked slightly in front of the Custom House. A great portion of the town is down burying numbers in the ruins. A cloud of vapor was seen to rise from between the Palm and Keelung islands, which was succeeded by the water of the harbor running out seawards, leaving it as dry as Run rock for some seconds. Everything was carried away with the receding water. These at then returned in the shape of two large waves swamping sampans and drowning the people therein, and junks were carried away high and dry opposite Keelung. The harbor was in a state of agitation the whole day, on the 20th it was hardly quiet. Instead of the water being clear as usual, it became yellow and muddy. Enormous quantities of fish were washed ashore and secured by the Chinese. The people appeared to exhibit the greatest indifference with regard to the fate of the sufferers, and would not assist in extricating them without a guaranty of some reward. When the water left the harbor a man got down from a junk, but before he could reach the shore was overwhelmed by the returning water. Numerous coal boats were upset or sunk. An old wreck of a junk deeply embedded for years in the sand, was washed up high on shore. Luckily no foreign vessels were in port.

A NOVELTY OF PARISIAN CRIME.—At the last Bal de l'Opera Paris a commercial agent met a masked lady, as he imagined of the great world. A carriage and livery servants waited her exit. She graciously permitted the admirer to accompany her to her house but on condition of his allowing her to blindfold him. The drive lasted about an hour at the expiration of which time the carriage stopped at a house which they entered ascending a staircase of thirty steps. M B heard a door open. On the lady taking off the bandage from his eyes he found himself in a brilliantly lighted apartment, and in presence of three men armed with pounards and revolvers. "If you stir you are a dead man; give us your money and you shall be left at the Pantheon. There was, of course no alternative, the victim laid his purse on a table and at 5 o clock in the morning was deposited at the Pantheon, the carriage immediately starting off at full speed. The police vainly endeavored to trace out the affair, but no light was thrown on the mystery till a few evenings since M Paul B a grocer, was walking home by the Rue Souffiat, when a young woman suddenly fell almost at his feet and in such a manner that M Paul was obliged to support her. She appeared to have upraised her ancle and therefore to be unable to walk. The grocer had nothing left for it but to offer the lady his arm, and escort her to her lodging Rue Monffotard. Arrived at the porte cochere her sufferings prevented her ascending the stairs without his aid. She lived on faience, on reaching which story she knocked at a door which at once opened, and M Paul was instantly seized by three men, who enacted precisely the scene of the Baldel Opera robbery, with the slight difference that they obligingly informed their victim that they belonged to a society scattered over Paris—therefore, if he betrayed them to the police his life would not be safe in any quarter. The first part of their story has proved perfectly correct the police having already 12 of their gang in safe keeping.

SHIPLEY'S PATENT PACIFIC

TURBINE WATER WHEEL!

OF WHICH THE ABOVE IS AN ILLUSTRATION has FOUR SETS OF BUCKETS AND USES THREE-FOURTHS OF THE WATER PRICE.

The old high priced unequalled and unrivalled wheel has been PLACED OUT by a fair working trial made by Mr. H Kelly at his saw mill and the public can see what he says as to the only difference between the following testimonial over his own signature

MR H W SHIPLEY Sir In reply to your inquiry as to how I like your Pacific Turbine Wheel, I have to say that I have used one over 61 cast Three Leffel wheels 10 13 and 4151 choke gate. Your wheel substituted your 10 inch wheel for the 15 inch Leffel wheel though underrated it works the machinery [illegible] using 550 of water per minute more than the 15 Leffel. At your request I subsequently took your wheel out it at it might be finished and then I put in a 15 inch Leffel but it gave no better power than yours will do it used 52 cubic feet more water per minute. After some months I replaced your wheel and am still using it with the most satisfactory results. I have also put it to some severe tests. For instance while running a circular saw in a saw log 48 inches, I added the power of a 9 inch [illegible] planing from one eighth to one fourth of an inch in a second without in the least perceptibly changing the speed of both wheels. I am satisfied that your wheel is the best one-fourth of an inch open I have as much power as the Leffel with gates one-third open. At half gate your wheel gives double the power of the Leffel at half gate. At full gate the power of yours exceeds that of the Leffel by from ten to twelve per cent. At quarter gate, the Leffel holds no comparison with yours at quarter gate.

N B Mr Shipley was not present at either of the trials of his wheel to bring sick at the first, and absent from the state, at the second trial.

The following report of the Committee shows the result of the trial

SPRINGFIELD, O Oct 11 1867

This is to certify that on the 10th and 11th days of October 1867 I in company with Mr Staley Civil Engineer of Steel minebeing carefully measured the amount of water used in the tests made between the 10 inch Leffel Turbine and the 10 inch Welch & Burns Water wheels made by Bechtle, Blakeney & Baker made at Wehner's mill, near West Milton Miami Co. O. The contract requiring the tests to be made with ⅓ gates and ⅔ gates with the same amount of water for each wheel.
